Gigantic Liqueur Plot in New England States Revealed as Fliers Are Forced Down

Portland, July 3.—An alleged gigantic airplane run running plot in the New England States was revealed heretofore, United States marshals stated, by the capture of a seaplane and arrest of the pilot and his passenger.
The seaplane, piloted by E. K. Jaqueith of Atlantic City and carrying W. L. Strout of Bangor, was forced to land at Jonesport. Two hundred quarts of high grade whiskey were found aboard.
Sheriff King F. Graham said today that the liquor was to have been delivered to a motorboat at Half Way Rock, fifteen miles east of the entrance to Portland Harbor.
Jaqueith and Strout were arrested today in Bangor. Their arrests and seizure are the first to be made in the New England States on charges of airplane running.
Deputy Collector of Customs F. B. Sawyer of Jonesport discovered the alleged plot. After the seaplane had landed and the hundreds of natives who had inspected it, had gone home, Jones did a little detective work.
United States Marshal R. B. Woodman of Portland, who happened to be in Bangor, directed the seizure of the outfit and the arrest of the two men.
Roy Savage of Portland was arrested near the beach at Underwood Spring today. Deputy sheriff seized an automobile containing 140 quarts of whiskey.

When Kenneth McDonald, grave registrar for the American Legion, went over the records for the funeral of Charles A. O'Brien, World War veteran, who died of pneumonia last week, he discovered $35 were needed to complete the funeral. McDonald went to Mayor Curley and told him the situation. The Mayor gave McDonald his personal check for $35. O'Brien was with the Canadian forces from 1914 to 1920, and later joined the American forces. He was wounded 12 times in action. Two sisters and two brothers, Jesuit priests and nurses, died in service in an Indian lepro colony.

It May Be Clear and a Little Cooler on the Fourth

Forecasters Smith today was reluctant to make a definite promise of good weather for tomorrow, but he did say that probably the day would be clear and not so hot as today or yesterday.
The reason that folks were so uncomfortable today, he explained, is because the high temperature was accompanied by a high humidity.
The official forecast: Showers this afternoon and tonight. Cooler late tonight. Tuesday probably fair, with variable west to northwest winds.

West street, Brighton, who was with the girls until dropped at her door, was the impression of being a gentleman who wished to save a group of girls a tiresome wait on a lone house corner.

With Miss Lynch, the two sisters had gone to a dance in Waterbury. They missed one of the late surface cars, and were standing on a street corner, faced with a wait of one hour before another car would come along. Then two men drove up in an automobile.

One of the men was about forty years old. The other was younger, apparently less than thirty. Both were well-dressed, decent appearing men. When they offered to drive the three girls to their homes, they gave the impression of being gentlemen who wished to save a group of girls a tiresome wait on a lone house corner.

ACCEPT OFFER TO HIDE.
The girls accepted the offer and went in the car.

"We rode in the back, while the two men rode in front," said Miss Lynch. "They made no advances of any kind while I was there, and were apparently respectable business men, just returning to Boston from some country place. I left the car at my place and the other two girls continued on their way to Smith street."

"I heard nothing more about them until I was told about the accident." After they had left, Miss Lynch at her home, the two motorists apparently changed seats, so that one of the sisters occupied the front seat with the driver, while the other sat with the second man in the rear.

The machine turned into North Harvard street and approached Smith street, where the driver increased the speed. And then the two motorists sought to make advances to the girls. Kane was the first one attacked.

BOTH GIRLS ATTACKED.
Both girls were attacked at the hospital, with her life ebbing away while anxious parents seek vainly to discover a slight of recognition in her bruised face, the girl cannot tell who she tried vainly to make the man stop his attentions; how she begged him, pleaded with him, cried to her sister for help when his attentions passed the stage of semi-harmless "petting."

When wracked, she made no attempt to defend her own words. For when she could endure no more, Mary wrenched her head from the car and ran to the edge of the speeding car, and leaped out to the pavement.

A few moments later Lillian followed her. The car continued on its way without once slowing down. James McCrene, 60, of North Harvard street, passed along the street a few days later, found the two unconscious bodies on the pavement. He summoned a passing motorist, who drove them to the hospital.

Mary is suffering from concussion of the brain, internal injuries, abrasions of the arm, left shoulder and hand, and a deep cut over one eye. Lillian also received a concussion of the brain, a fractured leg, some wounds and abrasions of both knees. Doctors hope to be able to save her life.

GIRL INSTANTLY KILLED IN OVERTURN OF AUTO
North Londonderry, N. H., July 2.—Planned beneath her automobile when it went off the road, a young woman turned in a deep brook near here, Miss Gladys Rich of Fitchburg was instantly killed, she was accompanied by her father, Charles W. Rich, and by Miss Dorothy Bolles of Londonderry, a child, both of whom escaped without minor injuries. The cause of the accident is not known.

Wires, "My God! I've Wrecked Train," Then Faints

Atlantic City, N. J., July 3.—(By International News Service.)—"My God, I've sent 33 on the wrong track!" This tragic dispatch is said to have been sent by John D. Wall, signal man at Windsor Junction, after the wrecked "Midnight Flyer" had been switched from the main line to its doom, according to reports reaching the Reading Railroad office here today.

The Atlantic City office immediately tried to get Wall on the wire, but was unable to reach him. He was later learned he had fainted.

NINE KILLED IN TRAIN WRECK

track, disappeared after the accident. Atlantic City, N. J., July 3.—At least five persons were killed and about seventy-five injured, half of them seriously, today when a Camden-Atlantic City express train, thirty-seven miles from here, and rolled down an embankment.

The investigation of the wreck was started at once. It was reported that the signal man's mistake in switching the express onto the wrong track caused the tragedy. The cause of the wreck is not yet known, but the wreckage is thoroughly examined. It is reported that twenty-two persons were killed, but the company announced only five.

The identified dead were: Walter Bennett, engineer; William Bennett, fireman; Ed. Worth of May's Land, N. J., a passenger. The injured list was variously placed between twenty and seventy-five. The fact that the train was composed of solid steel coaches probably kept the death toll down.

DIE IN RELIEF TRAIN.
A relief train bearing the injured reached Atlantic City about 6 a. m., but it could not be definitely learned how many persons it carried. There are indications that a number of the injured, whose names have not been learned, died on the way to this city. Conditions of the wreck were thrown around the station and every available facility was commended to rush them to the hospital.

Four physicians who had given first aid en route were joined at the hospital by nearly every doctor in Atlantic City in an effort to save the lives of a number reported seriously hurt. Rescued headed by the chief of fire department of Hammond and State police, worked for several hours under the glare of searchlights removing the dead and injured from the wreckage. The scene had been changed into a scene when the engine struck an electric light pole.

MANY HEROIC RESCUES.
The rescue work continued for an hour to extract one man who was wedged under the frightful weight of one car, encouraged and urged by the others, who were suffering from the heat. He died just as he was lifted from his steel prison. The initial "J. T. L." in his watch.

A little of a few days waited the removal of her husband from the mass of twisted steel. His back was broken, his head broken, his face bruised, his arms and legs broken. He was taken to the hospital, where he died.

White Flag Hoisted as Hotel Is Riddled
Dublin, July 3.—Following a terrible explosion which riddled the Hotel, one of the chief strongholds of the irregular forces, the insurgents have hoisted the white flag.

The prisoners were taken by the Free States, the rest of the seventy defenders being either killed or wounded from the bombardment. The only heroism in the battle was a single man who died or wounded in this terrific attack.

COLLINS' ARMY CLOSES DOOR OF VALERA

troops against a group of hotels in Dublin, the headquarters of the Irish Republican Army. Collins, the commander-in-chief of the Republican irregulars.

De Valera and his chief of staff, Michael Collins, were believed to be in the Hotel, one of the buildings under heavy shell fire. He is reported to have fled there when the Hotel Grenadier, his former headquarters, was captured.

It is estimated that the total casualties in the fighting Saturday and Sunday were ten killed and fourteen wounded.

The insurgents now hold only a small group of buildings in Dublin and upper O'Connell street, having been driven from the rest of the city. The Republican rebellion against the Free State appeared to be on the point of collapse, so far as Dublin is concerned.

In the attack upon the hotels held by the rebels, artillery was being used in Dublin street and machine guns in O'Connell street.

After a week's fire against the rebel stronghold increased in intensity. Machine guns and light artillery were used against the Communist stronghold commanded by the Countess Marieiev. The Communist drive failed to break through.

In upper O'Connell street the regulars began a sniping movement against the rebel stronghold, keeping up steady machine gun fire from all sides.

A number of buildings were captured by regulars operating in a series of attacks. The Provisional Government has established a censorship of Dublin news. The irregulars have been reported from the province.

The Free State barracks at Tipperary and Limerick were burned. The irregulars also claim a success at Limerick.

Father Abbot, a Republican sympathizer, who was released after his capture in Four Courts Jail, is reported to have been detained by the Free State forces.

FAITHFUL LYNCHING DUBLIN.
The situation outside of Dublin is obscure, but officials of the Irish Provisional Government are hopeful.

There are indications that an engagement is being fought there between the Irish irregulars and regulars. The Irish irregulars have issued a manifesto, claiming military success in the capture of the Four Courts, O'Donnell, Ballynagall and other strongholds.

The signing of the treaty has been avoided, the difference which arose among us on the ordinary constitutional way, counseled in December. The departure from that constitutional path has forced on the nation all the horrors which ever attend civil war.

Fear Bobbed Hair Will Make Our Women Bald

Washington, July 3.—The fearful prospect of a nation of bald-headed women following in the wake of the hobbled hair craze, has divided Washington beauty parlors into two bitter camps, while in the distance rumbles the thunder of an impending curling-iron war.

If fact, it has been solemnly affirmed that the curling-iron, started for ventilation, frequently gives up the battle and falls out.

The hairdressers now hold only a small group of buildings in Dublin and upper O'Connell street, having been driven from the rest of the city. The Republican rebellion against the Free State appeared to be on the point of collapse, so far as Dublin is concerned.

GIRLS' HIDE ON AUTOBOMBER

WANT FEDERAL MOVE TO COAL STROKE PARLEY

Washington, July 3.—Only a possible proposal by the administration appeared today to baffle any prospect of a break in the deadlock faced by bituminous coal mine operators and officials of the miners union on meeting for their third joint session of the conference called here by President Harding to devise means of settling the coal strike.

Following the formal votes at which each side rejected the proposal of the other as to the basis for negotiation of new wage scales, and later separate meetings of the two groups at which each was said to have held firm to the position taken, there had been no indication today that suggestions the government might have to offer as a means of progress in the negotiations.

Secretary Hoover and Davis, who attended yesterday's session, announced in a joint statement that the operators first voted down the miners' proposal for a central committee of mine wage conference and the latter, immediately after, rejected their opposition to the operators' proposal for individual wage conferences in each district.

Girl Bride Charges Jack Falsely Gave Winchester as Native Place to Marriage Registrar—Also Denies He Ever Was "Banker"

Produced by the Associated Press. Eleanor Montgomery Sanborn today charged that Jack Winchester, her twenty-year-old husband, made two false statements when he applied for their marriage license. She says his claim that he was born in Winchester is not borne out by any public record, and that when he listed his business as "banker," he misstated his occupation.

Eleanor's latest accusation brings to light for the first time absence of any record of young Sanborn's birth in Massachusetts, although he represented and insists that he was born in the town where his parents now reside. But not in Algonquin.

In writing the decision Chief Justice Arthur P. Fogg said the determination by the Commissioner of Banks to collect an assessment of 100 per cent from the stockholders is not a mere exercise of a judicial function. It is a practical business question.

The Bank Commissioner was also authorized by the court to transfer $18,219,488 out of the credit of the Prudential Trust Company to the Prudential Trust Company's general department to meet the savings department.

Initials on Frocks Latest Society Fad

on North Shore, Says Betty Alden

BY BETTY ALDEN.

THEY'RE wearing their initials embroidered upon their frocks down at the North Shore tailors.

Among the smart matrons adopting this latest whim of Dame Fashion is Mrs. Hendricka Hallett Whitman, the former Adelaide Chaffield-Taylor, who was one of the prominent matrons clustered about the tea table at the polo tournament held over the weekend at "Pittsmeads," Prides Crossing.

Mrs. Whitman, a tall, slender woman, wore a dress of white serge, with her initials embroidered in black into a diamond shaped monogram upon the front. A wide rimmed hat of straw, trimmed with feathers, set off to advantage her brunette coloring.

Vivacious Mrs. A. Lynde Cochran, who starred as Polly Peters, the comical heroine of "Why Not?", written by Mrs. Whitman, was in charge of the tea. Which reminds me that early-colored frocks of cretonne seem to be coming into great vogue this season, and on both days of the tournament Mrs. Cochran wore dresses of that material.

Helen Mrs. Cochran was also Mrs. E. F. Moley (Dorothy Fennell) of the "Why Not?" who is the all-around colony at Beverly Farms. She was most becomingly adorned in a light blue linen dress, very simply made, with a small two-colored hat and deep blue eyes. Mrs. Moley, by the way, is always called "Ducky," the appellation having clung to her since childhood, when she was dubbed the "Duchess."

Mrs. Alvin Sortwell (Elise Pollard) was kept busy making change at the tea table. She wore a soft clinging gown of gray chiffon, with a hat and bare feet of the same color. She is practically never seen without one of these soft soles along the shore. Her husband, "Pete" Sortwell, was one of the busiest members of the committee in charge of the equine event, which must have netted a neat sum for its beneficiaries.

Mrs. Harry Pratt McKess, Jr., the former "Duchess" of the "Why Not?" was in charge of the table along with the others. Her costume was entirely of white—and of white, by the way, one seems to see a great deal. Mrs. Valentine Hollingsworth (Ruby McCormick), who was one of the many others wearing white, was in charge of the refreshments. Her costume was entirely of white—and of white, by the way, one seems to see a great deal.

And so much for the tea table and its busy group of workers.

Easy to look upon, indeed, were the damask frocks worn by the brilliant attendants of Marjorie Thomas, whose marriage to John Farrell Atwell was celebrated on Saturday at Christ Church, Hamilton.

The bride, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Thomas of Hamilton, was with a court train of the same material. Her tulle veil was caught with orange blue, and the shower bouquet being comprised of lilies of the valley and purple orchids.

The eight bridesmaids were given the traditional eight charming frocks of the style of 1881. They were all given the same frock, and the bridesmaids were given the same frock, and the bridesmaids were given the same frock.

TEXTILE STRIKE

48 HOURS' COIT

By CHARLES O. POWER.
Manchester, N. H., July 3.—"More discussing the workers' side of the New England textile situation, let me make a statement that will interest all the textile manufacturers and operatives of the North. We are going to the South to wage another battle for forty-eight hours, and this time we shall have powerful influences back of us; this time it will be a fight to a finish."

That speaks Thomas P. McMahon, president of the United Textile Workers of America.
"Furthermore," he said, "this is the first announcement of our purpose to do this. Our plan is made. They are the result of most careful deliberation. They have the approval of our wisest heads."
The chief of the mill operatives of the United States declares his organization is determined to stay the battleground of Southern competition even for all the time that it takes the next war on unskilled hours of labor for men, women and children at starvation wages in the mills of the South.

DEFENSE OF HIGH RATE

Washington, July 3.—Defense of the Republican policy of building a high wall against importation of articles manufactured by cheap labor in Europe was made by Chairman Porter of the House Ways and Means Committee in a state of mind just before leaving here for a trip to Michigan and the Pacific Coast.

Mr. Porter said the exhibit recently placed in the Senate to show the wide range of prices charged for manufacturing articles abroad and the retail prices at which the same articles were sold by American importers, justified the efforts of the tariff writers to keep European-made articles out.

Republican campaign managers plan to use the exhibit in the congressional elections as an argument in support of the tariff, he said.

Starting from a letter received by Representative Tilden of Connecticut, Mr. Porter said he was in the belief that the tariff was not the cause of the high rate of wages in Europe.

The First Fourth---and the Latest

"When in the course of human events..." On that first Fourth of July, in 1776, the Revolutionary Fathers deemed it desirable to tell the world why the British colonists in America were declaring their independence of the Mother Country.

Since that day, America has not only succeeded in assuming a separate and equal station among world powers, but she has achieved a physical greatness, an economic strength, and a moral might of which Washington and Franklin, Jefferson and Hamilton may indeed have dreamed, but which they would not have presumed to prophesy.

On this latest Fourth of July, 146 years after that first Declaration, it seems to be necessary again to set forth the reasons for our separate existence.

As the result of persistent and successful propaganda during the period of the recent war, it has become the political, commercial and social fashion to think of American principles, purposes and policies in terms of British diplomacy and British desire.

To be frankly, consistently and enthusiastically American imposes upon an individual, a group or an enterprise the need almost to apologize for a belief or a program which embodies American ideals and plans, without reference to their acceptability to Great Britain.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN and other Hearst papers are frequently referred to as anti-British, because they are so consistently and without apology American in their spirit and their speech, and because they are unmuzzled when occasion requires protest against America's too easy subservience to British leadership and British wish.

On this latest anniversary of the first Fourth, it is well for us modern Americans to test the quality of our independence of spirit by comparison with that of the founders of our democratic republic.

We have lost all hostility toward Great Britain. Nor do we love Great Britain less because we have learned to love humanity more.

AMERICA IS THE FRIEND OF MAN.

Through our varied population, by traditional principle and by deliberate purpose, we are effectively bound to the rest of the race with ties of human sympathy.

We recognize that above all nations is humanity.

The maintenance of our "separate state" is symbolic. It means not isolation, but our intention to serve mankind as an example of embodied democracy. Also it betokens our readiness to bring, with unprejudiced independence, the weight of our moral and material power to the cause of right and justice among the nations.

In our relative aloofness, we are, nevertheless, more deeply and genuinely related and more practically helpful to all mankind than any other nation which may piously profess what we, in the spirit of brotherhood, practice as matter of course.

AMERICA IS THE FRIEND OF MAN.

The Cost of Woman

Copyright, 1932, Star Co.

Had Adam known that his rib was to be taken and turned into a woman, would he have consented?

A woman's club raises the question. The woman of today, like Pandora of old, is bound to pry into things and turn loose a lot of troubles.

That abstracted rib was supposed to be a closed incident. The borrowed member was long since restored to man, and for countless ages he has had the rib as well as the woman close to his heart.

And, after all, the profitable and vital question at this late time is not as to what Adam might have done had choice been his, but what the man of today is willing to give up in exchange for woman and the fullness of her blessings.

Now, as in Adam's time, man must sacrifice in order to have the rich treasures of womanhood. He must today, as always, supply the material to make the woman who is really his own counterpart. She is more exacting now than she was. She requires more than a rib.

It may be a temper he must curb, a disposition he must train, habits he must conquer, pet vices he must give up, to cultivate the love and faith and trust and genuine sympathy that make a woman truly his joy and blessing.

The Collector

Copyright, 1932, Star Co.

Collecting is a mild form of mania that is quite common. It is prevalent in lunatic asylums, where many inmates will pick up any bit of paper and secrete it carefully.

Among members of society who are rich or otherwise idle this mania may also be found affecting grown men and women.

What about collecting postage stamps? Stamps are seldom beautiful, and all the geography and history that they teach you could put in your eye.

They are collected merely for the pleasure of collecting. There are stamps, however, for which collectors give thousands of dollars, merely because they are rare.

Collections of postal cards are mainly valuable for the purpose of driving a beauty out of art.

Collecting book plates may promote artistic appreciation, and the man to whom Browning alludes who desired to prolong his life only that he might increase his list of collectors possibly had some mild scientific aims.

Collections of arms and armor and gold snuff boxes are usually confined to the rich, but there is on record a case of one poor man who collected barrels of common pins.

Fourteen over the battlefields are now busy picking up bits of shells, bullets and bones to bring home as souvenirs.

One man collected bits of hangmen's ropes.

And then there are collectors of autographs. Whom may heaven forgive. We cannot.

But why continue the sad theme further?

The Voice of New England

Our Flapper

Editor Boston American:

I have been reading with delight the stinging told experience of the flapper, who is the female Peter Pan, the juvenile John Billings and the modern Aristocrat. But once in a while she misses on one cylinder.

I refer particularly to her "Key to the Flapper" in your issue of Saturday. In it she defines "kibbles" as a loud talking male. That, alas, is not so.

A kibbler, flapper, is a gentleman who stands by your side or behind you when you are playing poker or pinball and tells you what to do with your hand.

He never gets into the game himself, but eternally acts as an adviser when his advice is not sought. That's a kibbler.

For a substantiation of my definition I refer the flapper to the board of governors of the Friars' Club in New York, who found the kibbler nuisance so great that they put up a sign restraining the activities of kibblers to certain nights each week.

Whereupon the kibblers organized a union and demanded that they be given an eight-hour night.

The matter was arbitrated on the strength of a stirring address made by Louis Brandeis, who is head of the National Union, Friars' Local No. 1.

Return the Petitions

Several hundred ministers and others have taken petitions to blooded Americans and demanded for war-time offenders. Those who have and yet turned their petitions in are asked to send them at once to the Joint Amers Conference, No. 214 Washington Street, Boston.

Cheap Propaganda

Editor Boston American:

In reply to this Tory or British subject who signs his letter "Patriot," and who is so offended because wide-awake Americans refuse the name of British warships on their hulls, it is a privilege here that these United States for blooded Americans to curb this cheap, false propaganda from Downing street.

Let us learn that this country is still a free republic and that its proud citizens have no apologies to make to the German King of England for the war of

WHAT PAT WOULD DO IF HE HAD A MILLION

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

W hen he would if he had a million, he said he would hire a fine room in the best hotel, leave a call for a m. and, when they came to wake him, he would tell them to get up, because he did not have to get up for work.

Marion Harland, who recently dropped from the Tree of Life at the ripe age of ninety-one, was literally a household word throughout America as the result of her helpful cook books.

"If you want to stay young, have some work to do, something to get you up in the morning."

You sleep away your spirit if you stay late on Sunday. To be sure, Sunday is a day of rest. But you need not take it quite so literally.

To lose away in extra sleep a greater portion than usual of your valuable day away from work, that is too stupid a way to "kill time" and too much like deliberate suicide, being "dead to the world."

There is no quarrel with the abnormally weary person who seeks in nature's sweet recovery, sleep, the necessary relaxation from strain and tension and the mental replenishment of vitality. It is sheer self-indulgence.

Perhaps this is your way of slipping a forest of the bills of your supported. However, efficient cloud-pushing is to be the verent labor for mortals suddenly grown immortal through mere wisdom of dying.

Perhaps, by this extra hour or two or five, you think you slip back into an earthly paradise and experience surges of all sorrow and of man's faded necessity to earn his bread by the sweat of his brow and the turmoil of his brain.

Well, whatever your imaginings, or if you have none on this score, but simply have and continue the pillow-bugging habit on Sunday, please think it over and see whether you cannot convince yourself that there are better uses to make of your precious leisure.

Really, it makes you more tired to sleep longer than you really must.

Then there is the satisfaction of being awake and happily conscious of the day's freedom from the usual routine. And the knowledge that, through wise and varied use of your period of rest, you fit yourself for more efficient and productive work.

Of all days, Sunday comes laden with opportunity to meet the many needs of your nature, worship, indoors and outdoors, family life, play and comradeship, reading and thinking and writing, and the greatest of all, the essentially you are a free man or woman.

Surely, of all the joys of Sunday, sleep is the least; and Sunday and you spent together in full awareness of body and spirit are the greatest.

and not one that will tolerate weakness or indecision, you demand action and you usually get it.

Today is one of extremely unfortunate outlook. The heavens are an unhappy romance during the sign of Virgo, August 21 to September 21.

A troubled year awaits you, one in which you will experience worry and sorrow and unexpected change. Avoid the possibility of an unhappy romance during the sign of Virgo, August 21 to September 21.

A child born today will be self-reliant and dominant, and should not be severely tested.

Once-Overs

EVER TRY DOCTOR NATURE'S CURE FOR TIRED HEART?

Nature can cure a tired man, get out in the fresh air if you can.

If you feel grieved, little woman, get out in the fresh air if you can.

Nature can heal your mental wounds if you will let her.

Do where the breeze is great, the leaves are rustling and the birds are singing.

Go to nature for peace, and an understanding which is not expressed in words—you feel it.

Rows and rows of houses, forbidden laws laid sideways and noisy streets are not balm for weary hearts.

But when you are depressed go to the country, where you can breathe the fresh air.

Take an interest in the songs of the birds.

Look for the many attractive things which nature provides. Inhale long breaths of pure air, drink from a cooling spring, or a crystal clear stream.

You will be surprised at the change which will come over you. Nature heals and calms and cools and soothes the tired heart. She puts of doors.

SEEN AND HEARD

THE Canton Unitarian Church

is called by many people "The Old Pineapple Church." Over the door of the main entrance of the church is a pineapple finished in gold leaf. Old Boston used to put the pineapple symbol over their doors to show that the inmates were hospitable.

After a while, to increase the feeling of sociability, a few New England churches adopted the same symbol. It is worth putting over every church.

Weymouth is proud of its quaint signs. One which never fails to attract motorists on its way to Nantasket reads: "Lobsters. Enter Here." Nearby is another ancient sign: "Declaration of RESIDENTS A Specialty."

Lost there be any doubt about it, REPRESENTATIVE JOHN J. CAMPBELL of Ward 14 asked that his friends be informed through this column that he will seek election to the House, not to the Senate. He stands forth as a conspicuous advocate of old-age pensions and has received from GOVERNOR CIX one of the spools which was used to sign the bill increasing the payments to widows with children under the Workmen's Compensation law.

JOSEPH WALKER'S three sons, headed by JOSEPH R., will do much of the organization work for his campaign against SENATOR LODGE. One served in the army, one in the navy and the other in the flying corps during the war. Walker has opened headquarters at No. 129 Boylston street.

Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway has a sign which is a quaint departure from the usual "No Smoking." It reads: "Men who respect women will not smoke in this car."

WENDELL P. THORPE says he has received from JOSEPH R. FITZGERALD a promise to meet him in joint debate, the subject to be "Old-Age Pensions." Why Mr. Fitzgerald should agree to debate that subject, if he has more or less a mystery, because his long record has been conspicuously marked by his advocacy of progressive laws.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL ALLEN's receipt of an honorary degree from Harvard, as "Our Hercules," who dragged the Hydra from the den of inquiry, reminds him of the story of the famous old Boston lawyer who, in an attack on the old Boston water scheme, denounced it as "the hydra-headed monster."

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON 'SUN DRAWING WATER'

By Garrett P. Serviss

"I WILL appreciate your opinion on the cause of a very puzzling phenomenon described as follows by John Burroughs in the Atlantic Monthly, in July, 1920," writes H. G. T. Here is Mr. Burroughs' description:

"There is another fitting and unapproachable apparition in the clouds which everybody has seen but which comparatively few have ever clearly observed. I refer to the familiar spectacle of what country people call the 'drawing water'."

"The effect of Mr. Burroughs' delightful description is no doubt: intensified for many minds by the mystery which he throws about the phenomenon. The most beautiful and imposing spectacle that the heavens ever display, but one has hardly help being surprised that this veteran observer of nature found anything puzzling in the phenomenon. The mystery is only apparent, and the explanation is so simple that it is almost too simple to be true. The ordinary principles of perspective, while it does not in any degree diminish the position of the wonderful vision.

Phenomenon Explained.

The rent clouds, miles away, in the picture plane, which is at right angles to the line of vision, are seen to be in the foreground. The "vanishing point" of the perspective lines is the party or wholly hidden sun, behind the clouds. The sun's rays are really straight, as, in fact, does the whole fan.

"Now, if someone writes to me and tells me that he has flunked that apparition and seen it off to the right or left of him, I shall put him down as a nature faker. Burroughs Perplexed."

"What the explanation is of these optical effects is so simple that it is almost too simple to be true. The ordinary principles of perspective, while it does not in any degree diminish the position of the wonderful vision.
